To Our Eastern Subscribers.

A small breakage in our press caused us to fail to get the NEWS off East yesterday till the afternoon's train and consequently will delay the delivery of yesterday's NEWS to all points on the A. & N. C. R. R. and along the W. & W. R. R. till to-day. This we know was a disappointment to our readers, but we can assure them we regret it more than they do. We feel it to be our contract with our readers to furnish the earliest information and we endeavor always to do so. The NEWS is emphatically the people's paper and if it fails to reach our subscribers regularly they will confer a favor by notifying this office.

Mayor's Court—Mayor Manly Presiding.

The following cases came up for a hearing yesterday:

Ira Burnett, drunk and disorderly. Left collateral of $7.25 for appearance. Ira didn't call again, so the city treasury was $7.25 "in."

Virgil Rix, a huckster in the market, was arraigned for violation of city ordinance in purchasing produce before the hour provided by said ordinance. Evidence was adduced showing that he wilfully purchased eggs from a wagon, but Rix swore that he did not, and the case was dismissed.

Meeting at House's Creek.

We learn through Mr. G. T. Chappell, chairman of the Executive Committee of House's Creek township, that a meeting of the citizens of that township will be held on Saturday, the 19th inst., for the purpose of organizing a Tilden and Vance club. We are glad to hear that our friends are awakening to the importance of such a move, and hope every man in that vicinity will be present.

Educate Your Children.

No excuse can be given in after years for your children's having grown up in ignorance if you neglect to take advantage of the opportunities offered you now for their education. Send your children to school.

Excursion to Philadelphia.

An excursion train will leave this city next Tuesday, the 8th inst., for Philadelphia, by the R. & G. R. R., connecting with the steamer "Florida" at Portsmouth. Fare for round trip $18.75. See advertisement in another column.

If you want to buy some good fresh butter, new cheese, nice honey, or New-River mullets, you should call at Wollcott's, at his Open-Front Store—he can sell you them cheap for cash.

A good, experienced Cook, who can bring good references, can obtain a situation by applying immediately at this office.

THE GARBLED LETTERS—A DISCOVERY.

We have received reliable information from a very high source, that it has transpired in Washington that the garbled letters which Judge Settle is showing in the west were obtained from the department where Gov. Vance's war letters are kept, by the notorious JOHN G. HESTER.

This infamous man is said to be the tool employed to make the garbled extracts from Vance's letters, which the Republicans are laying so much store by in this campaign.

John G. Hester—a reputed murderer—a known swindler—a detective and spy—a wretched government parasite—a vile, sneaking and contemptible hypocrite and impostor—is a fitting instrument to do such work.

Supreme Court.

Court met yesterday at 9 o'clock. All the Justices present. The following cases were argued:

State and C. A. Price vs. Sylvanus Beasley, from Johnston. Argued by J. E. Bledsoe for the State. No counsel for the defendant.

John Wents and wife vs. W. J. Black, from Mecklenburg. Argued by Vance & Burwell and Battle & Mordecai for the plaintiffs; Shipp & Baily, Clem. Dowd and W. J. Montgomery for the defendant.

J. C. Cooper, trustee, vs. Augustine Landis et al., from Granville. Argued by Hays & Peace and Busbee & Busbee for the plaintiff; and Batchelor & Son and E. G. Haywood for the defendants.

State vs. Cephus Hudson, from Granville. Argued by Attorney General Hargrove and J. Eaton Bledsoe for the plaintiff. No counsel contra.

L. C. Edwards vs. Archibald Kearzey, from Granville. Argued by Batchelor & Son and E. G. Haywood for plaintiff; T. L. Hargrove and J. E. Bledsoe, contra.

Tilden and Vance Club Meeting.

At the regular meeting of the Young Men's Tilden and Vance Club last night, in the absence of the president, Mr. Sherwood Haywood, one of the vice-presidents, was called to the chair. About fifteen names were added to the roll.

Mr Frank Heartt, the treasuer, rendered his report for the month of July, showing a good amount on hand. The report was adopted.

Mr. Frank Stronach moved an amendment to the constitution, which was adopted. The following members were appointed to attend the public meeting at Franklin, in Swift Creek Township, on the 12th instant: Frank Stronach, A. D. Royster, Weston R. Gales, G. E. Leach and Frank Heartt, These gentlemen were also instructed to procure speakers.

Adjourned.

I. O. G. T.—Installation of Officers.

Let Us Have an Excursion.

Why don't somebody get up an excursion to some point on the railroads, and give the public a chance for some true recreation? Raleigh always has been behind in such matters, and it is to be regretted that there is such a lack of enterprise on the part of our young people, who seems to be always ready for a little innocent enjoyment. What say you, John (Capt. Horton) to such an enterprise?

The Circus is Coming.

Commence saving up your dimes. Pomp and Charlie say the agent of the world renowned John Robinson's ("combined, double-acting, hydraulic, back action, and all that sort o'thing) circus is expected in a few days to stick up his bills.

Since writing the above we learn that the agent came yesterday afternoon, and is stopping at the Yarborough.

Monthly Meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board met last night, Mayor Manly in the chair. Little business of importance was transacted. The City Clerk was instructed to proceed at once to collect the arrearages of city taxes, and also the taxes due for this year.

On motion of Mr. Fleming the Street Commissioner was ordered to complete the cistern at the intersection of Davie and Dawson streets, and to report to the Board the cost of building the three others authorized to be built some time ago—one on Hillsboro street, one on Blount, and the other on Person.

Governor of Georgia.

Gen. Alfred H. Colquitt was nominated for Governor by the Georgia Democratic Convention daybefore yesterday. He is a native of that State, and before the war was a member of the Federal House of Representatives, in which body he occupied a prominent position. He went into the late war as a colonel of a Georgia regiment in the Confederate army and was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general. He commanded the Confederate forces at the battle of Olustee, Ga., and won high praise for the skill and gallantry displayed in that engagement. Since the war Gen. Colquitt has been engaged in the insurance business, and has been prominently connected with the grange movement in Georgia. He is about fifty years of age, an able speaker, and with the exception of Gen. Gordon is perhaps the most popular man in Georgia.

Send your pamphlets and books to the NEWS Bindery to be bound. John Armstrong, Superintendent of Bindery.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The New Depot on the R. & A. Air-Line Railroad.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:

In your daily, of 30th July, is a letter from Haywood, Chatham county, signed "Justice." The writer makes a fling at the Raleigh & Augusta Air-Line Railroad, because of the recent location of a depot on the lands of Dr. R. K. Smith, and insinuated that it was done by undue partiality to "Rads"; meaning, of course, some person of the Radical or Republican party. Now, that company can, no doubt, take care of themselves, but for the information of the public, I beg to state a few local facts.

Dr. Smith owns all the lands adjacent to every side of the location referred to, except a joint interest in 48 acres by a Rad. And that Rad has a much larger interest at Haywood and would greatly prefer a depot there to any other point on the road. He has openly joined the citizens there for the last five years in all their efforts in that direction. But having ascertained from a reliable source that there were some serious difficulties in the way of curves, heavy grades and deep cuts, immediately in and at Haywood, he joined others in presenting the claims of the nearest place to Haywood, which was free from these difficulties; and that is the present location. But his decided preference for Haywood has all the time been well known to the managers of the Road—so he was not the Rad to whom the company have been unjustly partial. Then it must be Dr. Smith! Well, "Justice" may have a secret way of finding out Rads, as I sure it will greatly amaze every acquaintance of the Doctor's (except Justice) as well as himself to find that he is a Rad. I do not presume that the location was controlled by any unworthy motive, but if it were, "Justice" has probably hit the one which is the widest from the mark.

He says further that in aiding the Rads the railroad is "destroying every interest here," (Haywood,) Now the location of which he complains is not more than three-fifths of a mile from the line on one side of the village, and is not more than a mile from its centre; and a good and direct road can be easily and cheaply made from the village to the depot. And if evrey interest of the place shall not be enhanced, it will probably be simply because of the spleen of a disappointment which results from looking at only one side of a question, and forgetting that the mangers had to look at all sides and at other interests besides the important one—which "Justice" presents. For instance, the present location equals Haywood in good water and good health, is convenient to the churches and schools of that place, and is nearer to Pittsboro and Lockville, and is free from any troublesome grade, curve or cut.

WHAT CAN BE CURED need not be endured, although what can't must be. Among the bodily ills susceptible of complete removal by that benign tonic and alterative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, are general debility, malarial fevers, constipation, dyspepsia, liver disorder, and nervousness. Its remedial capabilities are, however, by no means limited to these maladies. Its properties as a blood depurent render it extremely serviceable in expelling the acrid impurities which produce those painful disorders, rheumatism and gout, and its invigorating and mildly stimulating effect upon the kidneys and bladder constitute it a useful medicine for impelling those organs to a complete performance of their functions when they are weak and inactive. In fact there is scarcely any disease of which weakness is an accompaniment, in which this admirable medicine cannot be used with advantage.

Extract of report from the celebrated physician, Erasmus Wilson of London, England: * * * "Several severe cases of consumption have come under my observation that have been cured by the timely use of Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorato.."

HON. THOMAS J. JARVIS.

We give up most of our space today to an elaborate and admirably written sketch of the life, character and services of the next Lieutenant Governor of this State.

The sketch is from the pen of Mr. Theo B Kingsbury, Esq., who is so well known as one of the most polished and graceful writers in the South.

The sketch is a valuable campaign document in many respects; as the public services of Mr. Jarvis since the war are closely intertwined with the history of the Democratic party in this State.

We have not space now to tell what we know of this able, popular and distinguished gentleman, except that he is eminently worthy the high honors which have been bestowed upon him.

GENERAL WILLIAM R. COX, who has just returned from a trip North, brings cheering intelligence of the political situation. Confidence prevails in Democratic circles; and the prospect of success this fall is very bright.

SKETCH

LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES

OF

HON. THOS. J. JARVIS.

OF PITT.

BY T. B. KINGSBURY.

The biographies of public men are amongst the most instructive publications of the century. Whilst there is more to interest the literary man in the lives of eminent poets, savans, historians and authors generally who have secured permanent fame, there is more of edification and encouragement for the people at large in the lives of those who have risen from the ranks, who have had a stern battle to wage against difficulties and disappointments, and who have attained places of honor and trust by no adventitious aids, but through their own inherent capacity, pluck and energy. In this country there is no royal road to success. Whilst there is much of that article which is commonly called "luck," but which may be better called destiny or providence, attending the careers of many men, with the larger portion of mankind who are successful there cannot be discerned any very direct manifestations of special providence. The men who rise above their fellows have some peculiar merit ordinarily which ver. They are fortunate in directing their forces in a well-chosen way, and are wise enough to mount the "tide" in their "affairs" when it is at "flood," and thus are borne to fortune and fame upon a profluent wave.

THE TRAITS THAT WIN.

Among the public men now upon the theatre of action in North Carolina, there is no one whose life more thoroughly illustrates the truth, that capacity, integrity, and judgment, when allied with energy and persistent will, are almost certain to secure popular favor and substantial success than the distinguished gentleman who is now the Democratic-Conservative nominee for the office of Lieutenant Governor. We believe that a brief but careful study of his career will be at once a source of instruction to all, and an incentive to activity, fidelity and consecration upon the part of our youth, and of those who are manfully struggling against untoward circumstances and unfriendly surroundings.

In sketching the life of Thomas J. Jarvis we mean to say no more than candor and truth will allow—to present him as he is, with no more coloring than we would give if he were not before the people as a candidate for an important political office. We shall not consciously exaggerate either in detail or in special particular. We do not recognize in him one of those men who has risen easily in the world like feathers that are quickly caught up by the fitful breezes and borne aloft because of their lightness. We regard him as made of very enduring stuff. His success has been received by far different agents than mere activity and sharpness. He has the real stamina of goodness and worth in him. He has the rare gift of judgment which is near kin to wisdom. He has true sympathy for his race—a very genuine fellow-feeling for the the sons of toil—a broad, almost universal charity.

We do not think it a difficult task to understand him. Some politicians are perplexing riddles. They are like the Egyptian Sphinx, of complex body and face. They are eternal stumbling blocks—a perpetual snare. They have more faces than Janus more eyes than Argus, more arms than Briareus. They can rival in the suddenness and rapidity of their political somersaults the acrobatic performances of the ring. We can never understand them, can never know where they are precisely today or where they will be to morrow. But it is very different with Mr. Jarvis. His life is an open book. In it we find no enigmas—no hieroglyphics. He that runs may read. All through it are candor, virtue, honor and honesty, and a true manliness, all written in the language of men, and in the clearest and brightest letters. Says Lavater: "Action, looks, words, steps, form the alphabet by which you may spell character." When we scrutinize the "action, looks, words, steps" of the subject of this sketch, we can find nothing that indicates aught but true nobility of soul such as we may admire and commend. The beautiful silken threads of integrity, consistency and consciousness run through the whole fabric of his fine character lending attraction and strength.

HIS BIRTH, PARENTAGE AND EDUCATION.

Thomas J. Jarvis was born in the county of Currituck, on January 18th 1836, and is, therefore, in the forty-first year of his age. He is in lineal descent from a family of revolutionary name. His father, Rev. B. H. Jarvis, was a devout, earnest, useful minister in the Methodist Episcopal church, and like most of his brethren who feared God and preached righteousness, he had but little of this world's necessary but perishable goods. The labor of his son on the farm was indispensable, so that at the early age of nine years little Thomas was following the plough, whilst the son of wealthier men around were at school laying the foundations of a useful education. Through all the changes of the year until nine summers had come and gone, young Jarvis "followed the team afield" and did all the work of an efficient laborer. He arrived at the age of eighteen before any favorable opportunity occurred for his turning from farming to study. Hitherto he had done faithful service in the maintenance of those he loved; the propitious time had come when he would do faithful work for himself. His excellent and reverend father, in whose service he had toiled so long and so industriously, was at last able to make arrangements whereby Thomas could attend school ten years. Accordingly, on January 18, 1855, our North Carolina lad, the fibre of whose character was robust and sinewy, after attending school for a year at home, entered Randolph Macon College, in Virginia, as a student. Owing to the character of his previous studies, his instruction being confined to the English branches, young Jarvis was compelled to enter the Preparatory Department. But it was impossible that one who was animated by a resolute purpose to conquer the difficulties of education as he had subdued the stubborn soil, should be long limited to the study of his own tongue. He therefore began with great earnestness the study of the ancient languages with a view to a full graduation.

INVINCIBLE RESOLUTION.

But a sudden and painful obstacle rose up before him. His father's means were too limited to allow him to continue his son at College without doing manifest injustice to his other children. This threatened to terminate at once the high and laudable aspirations of the son. A youth of less manliness would have yielded without a struggle to the sudden call of necessity, and which appeared to be the inexorable demands of fate, and henceforth remained "a hewer of wood and a drawer of water." But young Jarvis was made of other material. There was too happy a blending of the fine and hard metals in his character for him to submit to an infelicitous fate without a vigorous struggle. He had set his heart upon securing an ample education, and he resolved to overcome the difficulties in the way, however great and discouraging. He doubtless felt, as Dryden makes one of his heroes declare:

"Let Fortune empty her whole quiver on me, Souls know no conquerors."

He cast about him for some helping hand in his extremity, when Fortune smiled upon him.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

He found a hearty, sympathetic, generous friend who was willing to manifest his friendship by outward acts. It is quite easy to indulge in "words, idle words"—to speak encouragingly or kindly of our fellows. Any amiable soul will do as much. It is quite another thing to run your hands in your pockets and help those who are buffeting the furious waves that threaten to engulf them. That kind of so-called friendship that simply shines in the borrowed light of the sun is a pinchbeck thing at least; it is true friendship that grows bright and iridescent amid clouds and darkness. But what is this but to repeat in other words the saying of the Bible—"A friend loveth at all times; and a brother is born for adversity." We would not give a groat for holiday friendship; with the evening shades it is laid aside.

"Tis like the harlots' tears,
The statesman's promise, or false patriot's zeal,
Full of fair seeing, but delusion all."

But commend us to that friendship in which heart meets heart, which increases with the years, and which, like pure, sweet wine, becomes mellowed and rich with age. John Sanderson, Esq., was the kind gentleman, who, at this crisis in young Jarvis' career, stept forward and succored him. He lent him enough money to enable him to complete his college studies. How worthily his aid was bestowed is shown in the useful, honorable and distinguished career of his young friend and protege.

HIS GREAT DILIGENCE.

But, let the reader mark, young Jarvis did not relax his energies because he had found a friend. Most young men would have felt at liberty to enjoy their three months' summer vacation. Doubtless, our subject felt the need of relaxation and rest after nine months of close study and confinement. But he realized that both duty and gratitude required extraordinary exertions on his part—that he must not idle for a day, but all through the vacation time must labor that he might begin to reimburse his friend, or reduce the expenditures in his behalf. He accordingly taught a common school for one quarter each Summer. Thus toiling day and night through Summer and and Winter, he was able to be graduated with the class of 1860.

HIS LABORS INTERRUPTED.

As an instance of his thoughtfulness and nice sense of honor, we may mention, that he had insured his life for the benefit of his friend, to whom he was by this time no little indebted pecuniarily. Immediately after he was graduated he began teaching school that he might repay the more speedily Mr. Sanderson. He was thus engaged in the county of Pasquotank in the Spring of 1861, when the war drum was heard throughout North Carolina calling the sons of the old State to arms. Without having taken any part in the political discussions and intense antagonisms concerning the rights of peaceable secession and the preservation of the Union, intact and inviolable, when at last war appeared inevitable, and North Carolina must take her portion in the mighty struggle, like a good, brave citizen and devoted son, he felt it to be his imperative duty to take sides with his own people, and to peril all for home, country and honor.

HE ENTERS THE ARMY.

As a consequence, after having obtained the consent of the North Carolina Insurance Company, in which he held a policy, to enter the army without, in any way vitiating it, he joined the State Guards, a company commanded by Capt. (afterwards Colonel) William F. Martin, of Elizabeth City, in June 1861, and in July following went into camp with the company on the historic Roanoke Island. About this time, at the instance of Col. H. M. Shaw, of the 8th regiment, North Carolina State troops, Governor Ellis appointed Mr. Jarvis a Captain in that regiment. Having no special military training or aspiration, Mr. Jarvis declined the appointment. At the urgent entreaty of Col. Shaw, a brave and conscientious officer and a gentleman of superior abilities, who was afterwards killed in the battle of Roanoke Island, Mr. Jarvis accepted a commission as 1st Lieutenant in the same Regiment under Captain J. M. Whitson, an old veteran of the Mexican war.

DESPERATELY WOUNDED.

We regret we have not at hand the information necessary to give a succinct and lucid account of Mr Jarvis, military record. It is highly honorable. On May 17th 1864 in a desperate fight near Drewry's Bluff, Capt. Jarvis fell dangerously, and it was feared mortally wounded, from a minnie ball that entered the right arm about two inches below the shoulder joint, and thence passed diagonally through the body coming out near the spine. He was taken immediately to the field hospital at the Bluff, and fell at once into the hands of one of the enthusiastic disciples of the famous Dr. Sawbones. In opposition to the earnest protest of all the other surgeons, Dr. Styles Kenneday performed on our friend that dangerous and very painful operation known as "resection" i. e. taking out the shoulder-joint, and six inches of the bone below. He was carried from the field hospital to the hospital No. 4, Richmond, Va., where it was expected he would die, secundum artem. He however, remained in the hospital until the fall of the year, suffering the most excruciating agony the entire time.

A GOOD SAMARITAN.

The surgeons cherished scarcely any hope for his recovery during those long, agonizing months. It seemed almost certain that he would die. At the request of Governor Vance, whose heart is said to be tender and sympathetic by those who know him, Dr. Richard B. Haywood, a very estimable and high-toned physician of Raleigh, accompanied Surgeon-General Warren, (a distinguished North Carolinian, now in the service of the Khedive of Egypt) to Richmond Virginia, to look after the wounded from this State, and their name was legion. It was on one of his visits to the hospital that Dr. Haywood first saw Capt. Jarvis. His very critical condition, his intense sufferings, and the patient endurance with which they were borne, attracted his attention, and at once excited his deepest sympathy and interest. He quickly procured every comfort possible, and every remedial agent that could contribute to the recovery of the uncomplaining hero-martyr. Dr. Haywood spared neither time nor labor, and did all that humanity, friendship and skill, could suggest. Capt. Jarvis is not unmindful of those merciful ministrations. He cherishes a most grateful recollection of Dr. Haywood's assiduous attention and most timely aid, and believes that they contributed very greatly to his recovery. During those frequent visits of Dr. Haywood to the wounded soldier's bedside, an intimacy and friendship sprung up between them that have strengthened with the years that have since passed. Under a merciful Providence Captain Jarvis recovered after a very long and painful illness, but was never able to enter the service again, for even when the more than five thousand North Carolinians who belonged to the remnant of General Lee's once magnificent army, then reduced to not much over eight thousand muskets, surrendered at Appomattox Courthouse, Va., his once strong right-arm, now lay shattered and powerless in the sling that upheld it. Time has restored to it but little of its former power, and although he does not wear "an empty sleeve," as do so many of his gallant comrades who wore the gray, he carries a perpetual memento of the war in the maimed and weakened member that can no longer wield agricultural implements in time of peace, as it was wont to do, nor could it carry the spear or sword again, if these pacific utensils, the ploughshare and the pruning hook, were to be beaten into warlike instruments at the call of the Union.

HE BEGINS LIFE AGAIN.

The end of the war came at last. Life was before him. He was still poor, and he must start afresh with one arm less with which to labor and to wait. It was then that he fully realized how fortunate it was for him that prior to the war he had been so very persistent in his efforts to obtain a liberal education. He had a clear and disciplined mind, excellent morals, habits of industry, pure and upright principles, even if his right-hand had forgotten its cunning. With that head he must force his way through the world—a strange, new world, so changed by the rude results of war. The ploughshare of ruin had been driven deep in the virgin soil of the State, and with the arrival of the vultures and other birds of prey that came with the army of invasion, and remained after that army had gone, that they might tear and devour the carcass of the old mother, the very genius of desolation and poverty waived her fatal sceptre over the whole land. Captain Jarvis did not hesitate long what to do. Work must be done—a living must be secured. He soon commenced merchandizing in the town of Columbia, in the county of Tyrrell, and continued the business with some success for the next three years.

ELECTED TO THE CONVENTION.

In 1865, he was elected to the Andrew Johnson Convention which met at Raleigh, by the people of his native county—Currituck, receiving every vote cast except fourteen. His old friends and county-men knew that the times were so extraordinary as to require men to act who were discreet, firm, wise and just. They showed their excellent judgment in the selection they made.

HE READS LAW AND IS LICENSED.

While conducting his mercantile business for a temporary living and to secure the necessary means to enable him to carry out his future plans, he read law, and was licensed to practice by the Supreme Court at the June term of 1876. At the age of thirty-one he entered upon that profession to which he purposed to devote the remainder of his days. He continued to reside at Columbia, and in 1868, was from Tyrrell county, without opposition. He took his seat in that Legislature on July 1st, 1868, little thinking the important part he was to act in it before it should expire in 1870.

"There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will."

By nature quite modest and unassuming, wholly unskilled in the "ways that are dark" in which the mere politician so delights to tread, and with but little training in parliamentary usages, Capt. Jarvis made but little impression during the first session of that body which is destined to an immortality of infamy, and is as distinguished and separate by reason of its unmitigated corruption, bribery, peculation and impudence in the history of North Carolina Legislatures, as the famous Rump Parliament is distinct and peculiar among the Parliaments of Great Britain.—Never since the Almighty fiat gave form and motion to this earth has such a body of vandals, pariahs, vultures and vampires been gathered within the walls of any capitol. The curses which overtook the land of the Pharoahs when one of the name entered into an unwise and impious contest with Jehovah, seem to have been concentrated within one body, and to have been visited upon our poverty-smitten, greatly oppressed and despondent people. How shall they bear such an awful visitation—such an outpouring of the Divine wrath? How shall they,

"Bide the pelting of this pitiless storm.
How shall their houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Their loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend them
From seasons such as these?"

The accursed horde of devourers came with sharpened beaks and insatiate maws, and they literally ate up the whole land—consumed, blasted and destroyed everything. That infamous body deserves the execration of every honest man. It was in this shameless Legislature, that has left its legacy of corruption and unbearable debts, that will remain for decades to come an incubus upon the energies of our people, that Capt. Jarvis began his career as a lawmaker. His eyes were wide-open, and with beating heart he watched anxiously the greedy vultures as they held their orgies in the capitol and concocted their devilish plans for the robbery of the people. He waited patiently for the right time when he might strike with effect.

THE CONDITION OF AFFAIRS IN 1869.

It will be remembered how overwhelming was the Radical majority—how powerless and hopeless was the minority. What could the faithful few do in the face of the faithless many? Such was the manifold corruption, the sublime impudence, the swaggering bravado, the desperate game of that day that all really seemed lost. All good and faithful men, save a very few, felt that turn which way they might there was no way of escape from the impending and awful doom—that all was

"Infinite wrath, and infinite despair."

But there were a few who still hoped "for the good time coming." Jarvis watched and waited until his clear, cool, unerring judgment should say—"the time has come, now strike." The time had indeed come at last after a long and painful delay. On the 15th February, 1869, the Revenue Bill was on its several readings in the House, of which Capt. Jarvis was a member. At that time nine million of the Special Tax Bonds had found their way into the hands of unprincipled speculators and sharpers who hung around the corridors and lobbies of the capital like so many birds of evil omen, ready to fatten upon any garbage that might be thrown from the Radical flesh-pots.

JARVIS TO THE RESCUE!

It was just then that Capt. Jarvis came forward with a proviso to the Revenue Bill to this effect: Provided, That all the taxes for State and County purposes, imposed upon the real and personal property of the State, shall in no case exceed two-thirds of one per cent. See House Journal, Session 1868-'69, p 267.

He delivered a speech on his amendment which was so logical, so convincing, so unanswerable, that notwithstanding it was admitted if the amendment was adopted it would lock up all the Special Tax Bonds in the State Treasury; and notwithstanding the overwhelming strength of the opposition, that amendment was actually adopted. But, the Radical conscience that had been thus quickened for a moment into some semblance of life under the tremendous blows of Jarvis, soon relapsed into its original torpor or death; and Radical reason that had been stimulated under his vigorous and penetrating argumentation into temporary right-thinking, was soon hurled back into the sloughs and marshes that appeared to be its native element, and the Radical caucus did for the amendment what every honest tax-payer deeply regrets to this day, and what every rogue and robber rejoices in. It was resolved that the amendment should be strangled. In a day or two this important amendment was reconsidered and rejected. By this and other subsequent acts, a deep stigma was fastened upon the fair escutcheon of North Carolina—fixed there by corrupt, bold adventurers, and by unworthy natives who had apostatized and were recreant to duty, honor and race. But Capt. Jarvis tried to avert the injury and wrong. He can boldly say to the minions of power who thus dealt the blow, "I did what I could to shield the unprotected head of my dear old State. The wrong was not mine." Whilst to North Carolina he can truly say—

"Thou canst not say I did it: Never shake Thy gory locks at me."

THE CRUSHING RADICAL TAX OF 1869.

The special tax bonds were issued, and about one million of dollars was collected from the tax-ridden people of North Carolina, in the year 1869, to pay the interest only on them. That robbery can never be cancelled. The money thus wrested from the people has gone long ago into the pockets of the cormorants who have been sucking for so many years the life's blood of the State, and who are madly striving to obtain another lease on power that their nefarious and destructive work may continue.

HE BECOMES THE CONSERVATIVE LEADER.

But so adroit and well-aimed was this blow of Captain Jarvis', that although it failed of its end, it made him the leader of that little band of heroic, consecrated men in the House of Representatives, who were resisting the flood-tide of corruption and extravagance that was rolling over the State from the sea to the mountains, threatening destruction and carrying dismay.

A REMINISCENCE.

We remember how at that time the names of Thomas J. Jarvis and Plato Durham—sweet rest to his soul and lasting honor to his memory!—were upon the lips of every true man, and all that they said or did was read with the profoundest interest. Jarvis was conspicuous for his watchfulness, his deliberation, his self-possession, his wariness, his well-poised judgment. Durham was dashing and bold and defiant, hurling his anathemas into the very teeth of the robbers and bribers, and invoking Heaven's curses upon their baseness and cruelty.

A clear brain, a calm judgment, thorough self-possession, are very necessary qualities in a leader. These Jarvis has in an eminent degree. During the session of 1869-'70, he made excellent use of his prominent position.

HIS SKILFUL TACTICS.

Early in that memorable session, he opened a vigorous campaign against the enemies of the people by a series of operations that brought financial salvation to the State, and entailed sure and inevitable ruin upon its despoilers. How was it possible that a people who had been nearly beggared by the war—whose entire basis of credit had been swept away at one fell stroke, could bear the tremendous tax necessary to meet the interest due upon the Special Tax Bonds? To pay the tax was simply to crush the people. Captain Jarvis began his attack by a series of resolutions calling upon Littlefield and Swepson—those twin brothers in robbery.

"Whose game was states, and whose stakes"—— should have been the penitentiary for life, to tell what they had done with the seven million of bonds that had gone into their hands, and what had become too, of the more than a million of dollars of taxes that had been collected from the people in 1869, ostensibly to pay the interest on the bonds. Day after day the attack was renewed, but it was impossible to obtain any response to these iterated and re-iterated inquiries. The Radical oracles were dumb—the pilferers had become as silent as the grave. After again and again repeating the call for information, until he made the Representative Hall echo and re-echo with the true answer—stolen, stolen, stolen,—Capt Jarvis at last introduced to repeal the laws levying any tax to pay interest on the special tax bonds. Maj. John W. Graham, then the able Senator from Orange, having introduced a bill similar in character about the same time in the other end of the Capitol. Then began a fierce struggle in the House, that should never be forgotten by any honest citizen or oppressed tax-payer. There is not a man in North Carolina this day who has any character who does not owe Capt. Jarvis a debt of gratitude. Aye, the very women of the State, and their children around them, should rise up and call this true friend of the people and staunch patriot blessed.

For three long, exhausting weeks he fought for the passage of his bill. He made strong and earnest appeals to the few Republicans in that body, who dared to assert their independence in the least degree, and who had not been corrupted and bought up by the jobbers and speculators, to come up to his help, and cooperate with him and his friends in an earnest effort to lift the mighty burden of taxation from the almost ruined people. He brought to bear upon them the strongest arguments and the most persuasive appeals. He showed them as with the certainty of a mathematical demonstration that the people could not possibly stand the payment of such an enormous tax year after year. The opposition to the passage of the Jarvis bill was led by such men as W. A. Moore, a scallawag, (now Judge Moore,) A. S. Seymour, an educated carpet-bagger, (now Judge Seymour,) and G. Z. French, a shrewd carpet bagger also. These men had brains, boldness and tact. Around them stood their lieutenants who if less gifted with education and ability, were equally reckless, impecunious, and hungry. They were all conspirators engaged in as wicked and damning a plot as ever cursed a country or pillaged a people. They had already driven their accursed daggers deep into the heart of the old North State, and she was bleeding profusely from many gaping wounds. Her blood still stains their hands from which "all great Neptune's ocean" can not wash it was made. Jarvis, resolute, hopeful, sagacious, led the small Conservative band. His clear, calm voice could be heard above the tumult ringing all along the lines.

"Brave and inscrutable the leader stood,
Calm in his mien, and calm within his eye."

Wherever the battle was thickest and the conflict waxed most doubtful, there was our Captain, his tall form towering above the rest, animating his followers and inspiring them with the hope of victory. The white plume that waved in the bonnet of Henry of Navarre gave no more encouragement to his army in the hottest fight, than did the bugle tones of Jarvis sounding daily the onset give inspiration and confidence to the glorious little band that gathered around him. But the Conservatives stood not alone. Their thin ranks had been recruited. There were some honest, conscientious Republicans in that body—men who had not

"Bent the pregnant hinges of the knee,
That thrift might follow fawning."

They came to Jarvis' aid, and with their votes united to nearly all of the Conservative votes, were able to pass the bill, and thus save the State from further detriment. Let us not cease to honor and applaud them for what they did. In that important crisis they surely "rendered the State some service."

THE PEOPLE RELIEVED.

From that day, the people have been free from that infamous Special Tax levy of 1869, by which they were absolutely robbed of over one million of dollars. From that day, Capt. Jarvis became the almost master of the House—the Radical party being rent in twain. From that day, he has been one of the great favorites of the eastern section of the State, and when his admirable qualities of head and heart are fully known, and his great and invaluable services are remembered, as they should be, he will become one of the first favorites with the people of the whole State, of the Centre and of the West, as he is already of the East. He is sprung directly from the people, and is with the people in heart and soul and mind and body. True to his own honest convictions, he is unfalteringly true to the best interests of the people of every section of his dear, native North Carolina.

Always moderate in expression, free from personal bitterness, eminently Conservative in his views—wise, serene, prudent, firm, he soon became popular with the better class of Republicans, and many of them followed his lead towards the latter part of the session of 1869-'70.

Capt. Jarvis is said to have been the author mainly of the upon which we carried the State so triumphantly, electing Judge Shipp Attorney General by 5,000 majority. It will be remembered, that this was the first political paper issued by the Conservative party in North Carolina, in which the final settlement of the status of of the negro was admitted. But such an admission or acknowledgement was no new thing with Capt. Jarvis. He had voted on March 4th 1869, to ratify the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. As a sagacious and wise statesmen he had forecast enough to discern that the dominant North had resolved to carry out their plans of reconstruction, and that it was a foregone conclusion that the amendment, in which the rights and position of the negro before the law were clearly stated, should forever be a part of the organic law of the land. He wisely anticipated the action of those who have since recognized the same fact, and have governed themselves accordingly. Since the day the Legislative Address was issued, the status of the negro in this State has been considered as settled, and we have been at peace.

In what we have written, we have not been unmindful of the great effect upon public opinion the outrages of the Holden Administration and the Kirk War had; nor do we doubt that the victory of 1870 was in part the first of the corruption and wild extravagance of the Radical party. But after the long imperious rule of the Radicals, it would have been impossible to overthrow them without the adoption of wise political measures on the part of the Conservatives.

The Conservatives carried the Legislature of 1870 by a large majority, and upon its assembling in November, Capt. Jarvis was of the House of Representatives, he having been re-elected from his county. This was a fitting recognition of the great service he had rendered the State during the two preceding years when a tremendous conflict was waged between a handful of honest, faithful, patriotic men and a host of political charlatans and thieves. During the two years that Capt. Jarvis occupied the Speaker's Chair there was but few appeals from his decision. He literally ruled in equity. His fairness courtesy, impartiality and ability were willingly conceded by the opposition. There have been but few presiding officers in either House who could bear a comparison with him. In saying this, we but echo a common sentiment that prevails among gentlemen who have some familiarity with deliberative bodies.

Whilst a member of the Legislature he was the unvarying and zealous advocate of the strictest economy in the administration of the State government and all of its departments. Inflexibly honest himself, and from early life having practiced the rules of a rigid economy, he could not and would not countenance or sustain the wide-spread waste, the extravagance and corruption that distinguished the Government of that time. He, therefore, held that the public servants entrusted with grave, honorable and important duties should be held to the strictest possible accountability.

A FRIEND OF THE STATE ASYLUMS.

Capt. Jarvis was a very warm and constant friend of the two great charitable institutions of the State—the Asylum for the Insane, and the Institution for the Deaf, the Dumb, and the Blind. He exerted all the influence he could wield in behalf of those two noble charities. He stoutly and unfalteringly maintained that politics should not be carried into those State institutions—that the officers should be chosen with reference to merit and not party affiliation. When an effort was made to remove Dr. Eugene Grissom the estimable, humane and very efficient Superintendent of the Insane Asylum, he resisted the effort most strenuously, insisting that unless it could be shown that Dr. Grissom was either incompetent or unfaithful to his great and delicate duties, that he be retained. In this he manifested his wisdom and fairness, as he has done in all of his important political acts. Every well-regulated mind, not controlled by passion or prejudice, must admit the propriety and equity of his course in regard to the two grand eleemosynary institutions, that are among the chiefest ornaments of the State, and among the most eloquent exponents of our civilization and benevolence as a people.

It was a black day in our calendar when political iconoclasts broke in pieces the images and house-hold gods of our great State literary institution—the University. It was an evil day when the prostituting hand of Radicalism seized upon our asylums for the afflicted, and made them a part of their political machinery. Never let it be said that the Conservative party has imitated remotely such wicked, censurable examples.

ELECTOR IN TWO CAMPAIGNS.

In 1868, Capt. Jarvis was the Seymour and Blair Electoral candidate for the first district. He rendered excellent service. In 1872 he was chosen one of the Greeley Electors for the State at Large, and made an active and vigorous canvass. In 1874 he removed to the county of Pitt, where he has since resided and has practiced his profession. When the campaign of 1874 opened in Pitt, he was made chairman of the County Executive Committee. He accepted the responsibility and at once began the work of organizing them.

A GOOD LESSON FOR THE TIMES.

He never appeared to greater advantage than as an organizer of a party. What he did is well worth considering. Now is the time for systematic, thorough work, so let us see how this excellent political leader operated. He first appointed an active, intelligent, working executive committee for each township. He next subdivided each township, placing an active, wide-awake, earnest man over each sub-division. By this division of territory and of labor, each captain or leader could know well every voter. The area allowed each was not too large to be well cultivated. Through these committees he had full and accurate registrations of all the voters in the county sent to him, with the political complexion of each voter carefully noted. These registrations he had copied, and sent a copy to every adjoining township and precinct. What was the result of such excellent organization? In the first place, it prevents any fraudulent voting by the radicals. It was simply impossible for imported negroes to palm themselves off as residents. Every man was known thoroughly and where he belong'd. In the second place, it secured a full vote of the Democrats. Discipline had made them soldiers, and on the day of election they were nearly all at their posts. The heads of subdivisions could easily tell by two or three o'clock who of their sub-divisions had failed to come to the election, and all tardy voters were promptly sent for. In this way the Conservatives carried a county by over one hundred majority, that had never been carried before by either party by over a dozen majority.—What was done in Pitt, may, with the same efficient organization, be done in all the counties. O, for an indefatigable and capable organizer like Jarvis for every county in the State! With proper organization the State can easily be carried by 20,000 majority for Vance and Jarvis, and, more important still, for Tilden and Hendricks. Our shortcomings heretofore on the day of election are mainly attributable to the want of proper organization before that time. Let us do better in this great Centennial year—the nation's mighty jubilee.

ELECTED TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

In 1875, Captain Jarvis was nominated by acclamation by the Conservatives of Pitt for a seat in the Constitutional Convention. The same party organization was kept up, and by this and his own personal canvass he was elected over Jacob McCotten, a very popular man who had never been defeated before, by one hundred and twenty majority. Surely, in such results we have much to encourage us! Here is a lesson that every county might learn with profit to the cause of honesty and good government.

Captain Jarvis' services in that important body which assembled in Raleigh in September, 1875, are of such a recent date that we need not speak of them at length. It was unquestionably an able body of men—possibly the ablest that has met in our State within the last fifteen years. In that body, but few exerted as much influence as he did, and the services of but very few more as highly appreciated as were those he rendered. Indeed, there were times during the stormy sessions of that body, when the friends of order and constitutional reform turned to him instinctively to lead them.

A THREATENING TIME.

We remember well being present on one day of great and very unnecessary excitement. The Radical leaders, bent on disappointing the wishes of the people and breaking the force of the convention movement, had resorted to every sort of party dodge and trickery, had availed themselves of every recognized parliamentary obstruction, and at last, in a fit of sheerest desperation, had assumed the roll of boisterers and bullies of the Kansy-Sniffle kind. They carried it on that particular day with a high hand and an outstreched arm, creating the greatest confusion imaginable, and almost bringing about personal collisions in the hall. Their manner was insolent, overbearing, disgusting. It really appeared as if they were resolved on mischief, and purposed to break up the convention in a row. Nothing but the prudence and good sense of the Conservatives prevented the consummation of unscrupulous Radical ends. We have never witnessed such a scene in any deliberative body. The French Assembly in the last century when its members were drunk with crime and blood, or the South Carolina negro legislature, as described by Northern letter writers, when that body appeared in one wild phrenzy of passion, may have surpassed the confusion and excitement produced on the Radical side of the Convention. The following day, we were present also, but

HOW CHANGED THE SCENE!

The Hon. Thomas J. Jarvis this time occupied the Speaker's Chair, and it was a study to see the change in the transformation wrought by the ability, promptness, self-possession, firmness and parliamentary tact of the presiding officer. A thorough master of the rules of order, Mr. Jarvis soon reduced the tumultuous and recalcitrant members to good behavior, checkmated them at every turn by fair just and decisive ruling to which they were compelled to submit as they knew he was right. It was a splendid triumph of a strict parliamentarian over a faction fast degenerating into a mob.

In the Convention, he labored incessantly to have passed an ordinance prohibiting the laying of any tax to pay the infamous Special Tax Bonds, unless the question was first submitted to the people. The ordinance, however, failed, which is to be deeply regretted. From the first he was an uncompromising and pronounced enemy of those bonds, and so he will remain forever.

We have thus sketched the main points in Mr. Jarvis' career. We have tried to let the reader see what manner of man he is. We must detain you a little longer whilst we refer to some few of

of his character. He is in the prime of a very virile manhood. He is over six feet high, erect in carriage and well formed, weighing, we suppose, about 190 pounds. He has a florid complexion, a kindly, genial expression, with a blue eye that beams with intelligence and amiability. His manners are easy, quiet and pleasing. He does not attitudinize for effect, for he is too manly and genuine for such stage trickery. He is above all sham, hypocrisy or insincerity. He is a candid, open, true friend. His heart is large, and throbs in loving sympathy with all that is good and noble and generous and true. The people of his section of the State know him well, have trusted him often, and esteem him as highly as they do any of their leading men. No man commands in a greater degree their confidence and affection. A very intimate friend of Captain Jarvis' who resides in the same town, has written to us concerning the extreme tenderness of his heart and the deep sincerity of his affection. He says: "He is always ready to listen to the cries of the poor, to the story of the wronged, and to the appeals of the helpless, and is certain to render assistance if in his power. Without foolish pride himself, he dislikes it in others. He asks what a man is, and not what his grandfather was. If he be honest and upright it is enough for him to know." We like this. It shows that his heart is in the right place, and that his brain is not befogged. He is too well-balanced a character to act or think otherwise than is indicated by the quoted passage. No man of right principles and a clear understanding can regard a man as clever or ignoble according as his forefathers were one or the other. As Joseph Addison has long ago suggested, a good man may be rendered more illustrious by title and ancestry, whilst an ill one is only rendered the more contemptible. A man may be, as Tennyson so tersely states it,

"By blood a King, in heart a clown."

An American boasting of his ancestry when he has no special claims to recognition as a man of parts or character, is like the reflection of stars in the water; but for the bright originals above there would have been no light below. Or as our lamented friend, the late Hon. A. W. Venable, once stated it in our hearing more than thirty years ago: "A fellow boasting of his distinguished forefathers, when he is a degenerate and unworthy descendant, is like a luxuriant crop of potato vines—all that is really valuable connected with them lies beneath the soil."

Mr. Jarvis' style is clear, forceful, logical. He cannot be said to possess in any marked degree the gift of eloquence. And yet, he has a certain magnetism, and there is an unmistakable power exerted over an audience. He is master of himself, understands well in what direction his abilities lie, and he is too cautious and sensible to attempt that in which he must fail. He relies mainly upon the perspicacity of his statements, the conclusiveness of his reasoning, the candor, fairness and good, common sense of his remarks—all conveyed in plain, forceful diction—for his success in debate or in public address. Without the rich adornments of fancy, without the splendid decorations of culture and genius, there is an honesty, a deep conviction, an earnestness of manner, a simplicity, vigor and clearness of presentation that carry weight and conviction to the minds and hearts of his hearers.

His administrative talents are thought to be unusually good. His ability as a party leader is certainly of a very high order. There is no safer or wiser leader in our State, since the illustrious Graham "fell on sleep." He has many of those attributes that, when combined in any one person, form the successful party leader. Always cautious, and yet bold at the right time; always self-contained, self-reliant, equable in temper; never under the control of passion or intense prejudice; alert, sagacious, prescient, judicious—he is a safe man to lead his party in a great contest. While he never obtrudes his leadership upon any party with whom he co-operates, or upon any body in which he may sit, yet he never shrinks from its responsibilities and burdens when called upon to act by his confederates.

His abilities as a presiding officer are uncommonly fine. He is beyond question one of the finest parliamentarians we have ever seen. He has the very gifts or qualities that enter necessarily into the exactions of such a position. A man to be a successful and consummate parliamentary officer must have a retentive and accurate memory, very quick perception, rapid mental process, decision of character,—must be calm, just, patient, dignified, courteous, prompt, firm, tireless. If elected Lieutenant Governor, he will make a most capital presiding officer for the Senate. Like Wadsworth's "Happy Warrior," he is one, who

"Through the heat of conflict keeps the law
In calmness made————."

He is cautious in his promises, but keeps them when made. He never gives pleasure by promising when he does not mean to fulfill. He feels that if he should swear to his neighbor, he should steadfastly perform however much it might bring injury upon himself. "He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not." XV Psalm. This is not a description of the ordinary politician.

Capt. Jarvis is a sincere man—sincere in life, in action, in speech. He weighs his words, and means what he says. The true wisdom of life lies in the midway ground—in the golden mean. He walks as habitually and as nearly in this way as any man we know.

"He undertakes with reason, not by chance."

His moral sense has been disciplined and made acute by constant exercise. He has not been unwise enough to attempt the training and developing of his intellectual man whilst neglecting his moral nature. He knows that man to be but half a man at best, whose conscience and better feeling have been dwarfed and paralyzed by inaction or abuse.

He loves the truth. At the bar he is more concerned to find what is right than what is surprising and ingenious. As that noble experience of a jurist, Lord Tenterden, who was sprung too from the people, said of himself, so Captain Jarvis feels—"The search for truth is much more pleasant than the search for arguments." In all that he does there is thorough manliness, thorough honesty, thorough conscientiousness. In all his public life he has exhibited the highest integrity and patriotism. Unlike so many men in political life, he is not consumed by selfishness. When his own interests are involved, his character then shines with greater lustre. He subordinates self to the interests of the people. He is not one of those who according to Colton, reverse both the principles and the practice of the Apostle Paul—"become all things to all men, not to serve others, but themselves."

A martinet in disciplining himself as regards his public and private transactions, he demands of others the strictest honesty, the most undeviating integrity. His private virtues are as charming as his public acts are blameless and conspicuous. As a neighbor, as a citizen, as a friend as a husband, son, brother, he is all that you could expect of one whose youth was trained in the school of adversity whose life has been guided and controlled by principle, and who is naturally amiable, genial, benevolent and affectionate.

I have thus tried to portray with conscientious care and with constant striving for truth, one whose political life we have been familiar with since March 1st, 1869, when we became one of the editors of the Raleigh Sentinel. Capt. Jarvis is the Democratic-Conservative candidate for the office of Lieutenant Governor, and it will be most fortunate for the people of North Carolina, if so pure, so true, so capable, and so honest a gentleman shall be elected.

Two Million Bonds Toward the Payment of Awards by the Alabama Commission--Fast Mails--Two-Million-Dollar Clapp Nominated for Public Printer, &c., &c.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 4.—The payment of awards by the Alabama Claims Commission made since January 1st, commences on the 15th. Two million bonds for this purpose will be put on the market the 11th.

Cabinet full, except Morrill, who is indisposed.

The House Post Route bill is amended by the Senate, the Postal Committee to provide for the renewal of fast mails.

Ex Attorney-General Williams before the Whiskey Frauds Committee denies that his wife wrote anonymous letters, but states that several Cabinet ladies received bribes to influence their husbands.

Nomination—Almon M. Clapp, Public Printer.

The vote in the Banking and Currency Committee for the bill repealing the Resumption Act, associating with it the resolution known as Gibson's, for a commission to report next session, stood, ayes—Cox, Payne, Gibson, Hammond and Burchard; nays—Wike, Townsend, Kasson and Eames. Absent—Hubbell.

CONGRESS.

Hostile Indians in Florida--Establishment of Post-Roads--Probable Repeal of the Resumption Act--Garfield Replies to Lamar's Speech on the Political Situation, &c., &c.

WASHINGTON, August 4.—Senate. In the Senate the concurrent resolution to adjourn on Monday was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. West introduced a bill for the relief of persons having claims against the United States under the Captured and Abandoned Property act. Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. Jones, of Florida, submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of War to notify the Senate whether the hostile Indians sent to St. Augustine, Florida, to be imprisoned, are permitted to go at large, and by whose authority these savages are permitted to go at large in that place.

Mr. Hamlin demanded the regular order and the Senate resumed consideration of House Bill establishing Post Roads throughout the country.

Adjourned without action.

House.—In the House the River and Harbor bill, as it passed the Senate yesterday was reported.

The House is now voting to lay the bill on the table, which will not prevail and the bill will go to the Conference Committee on Legislative Appropriation bill. A committee met last night and will meet again to-day with prospect of agreement.

The new Conference Committee on Diplomatic Appropriations have had no meeting yet.

The Banking and Currency Committee this morning by a vote of six to four, instructed the chairman to report the bill to the House repealing the Resuption act.

Messrs. Hereford, Reagan and Dunnell were appointed a committee of Conference on River and Harbor bill.

The Committee on Military Affairs submitted a report in the matter of the contract for soldiers' head-stones. The report declares the contract was irregular, and it reflects somewhat severely on Secretary Belknap, but recommends no action. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. Garfield made a great speech on the political situation. He expressed his regret that he had not been able to see Mr. Lamar's speech in the Record, but still it had been so clearly stated and so logically construed that he could scarcely err in commenting on it. Mr. Lamar's speech was an earnest attempt to make progress in the direction of a return to good feeling, and in so far, it met his (Garfield's) earnest concurrence. He spoke over two hours. At the close of his efloit, prominent among the members who offered him their congratulations, was Mr. Lamar himself.

Mr. Lord, of New York, from the Judiciary Committee, reported back with an amendment what is known as the Blaine School Amendment to the Constitution. As reported it is as follows: "Article 16. No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibition of the free exercise thereof, and no money raised by taxation in any State for the purpose of public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, nor any public lands devoted thereto, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect or denomination, nor shall any moneys so raised or lands so devoted be divided between religious sects or denominations." This article shall not vest, enlarge or diminish legislative power in Congress." The last sentence is the one added by the Judiciary Committee.

McCrary, of Iowa, a member of the Judiciary Committee, favored the original proposition, but opposed the substitute as a nullifying clause. It amended the Constitution and denied to Congress all power to legislate on it afterwards.

Lord advocated it, and says that Mr. Blaine had stated to him over and over again that the amendment as drawn by him conferred no legislative power whatever on Congress.

The House proceeded to vote on the resolution, and it was adopted—yeas, 166; nayes, 5; the members voting in the negative, were—Blackburn, Bradford, Caldwell, of Alabama, Clarke, of Kentucky, and Forney.

Conger was placed on the conference Committee on the River and Harbor bill, vice Dunwell declining.

Adjourned.

THE INDIAN WAR.

More of the Custer Massecre--Disbanding of Indian Tribes--Tired of War and Seeking Agencies--Rain-in-the-Face Arrived at Standing Rock, &c., &c.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Tribune has the following:

"CAMP ON YELLOW STONE, M. T., July 27, via Helena, M. T., Aug. 3. The report that prisoners were taken during Custer's fight on Little Big Horn and afterwards murdered is untrue. The men with Custer all fell fighting gallantly to the last. The command moves to-day towards Rose Bud Valley, which is practicable for wagons. We will give up this stream. Communication has been opened with Gen. Crook. Trails are reported leading from Little Big Horn toward Rose Bud.

CHICAGO, August 4.—An official report from Terry states that on the 28th of July he would commence a movement up Rosebud with a view to forming a junction with Crook. A dispatch further states that news received from every quarter indicates the Indians breaking up into small war parties with a view to depredating the border settlements. Others are probably tired of war and are seeking agencies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—General Sherman has the following:

"The Quartermaster's train attached at Elk Horn on the Fetterman road, west of Fort Laramie. The wagonmaster was killed, a teamster wounded and three wagons burned. The ballance of the train has since arrived at Fort Fetterman.

Red Cloud's son and others reached Red Cloud agency. They had been in Rosebud fight. All the information indicates a break up of the forces in front of Terry and Crook. Standing Rock agency yesterday. Many small bands are in the neighborhood of the Missouri River agencies waiting to come in. They will only be received as prisoners.

THE EASTERN WAR.

Mankhtar Pacha to Take Refuge in Austria--Brttle at Gargusovatz--France Advised by Russia to Take Part in the Efforts at Mediation--The Porte Orders That no More Volunteers be Enlisted, &c.

VIENNA, August 4.—The Presse says Moukhtar Pacha is expected shortly to take refuge in Austria with his army, as he is so hemmed at Trebinge that it is impossible to force a passage north.

The new Free Presse publishes intelligence from Constantinople saying the enforcement of Midhot Pesha's proposed constitution has again been postponed.

BELGRADE, August 4.—Official dispatches say the Turks attacked Little Seawardik, and were repulsed. Thursday they attacked the Servian position north of Gramada. The result of this attack is as yet, unknown. The battle began Thursday before Gargusovatz, but no bulletin of result as yet been received.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The Presse publishes under reserve, as not yet confirmed, a statement that France has been advised by Russia to take part with the other powers in the efforts at mediation, and replied that it would be better first that the powers understand what are to be the points of intervention. Russia evidently wishes for immediate intervention.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The Herald has the following cable special:

LONDON, Aug. 3.—A special correspondent of the Herald at Viena telegraphs under date of August the 3d, that the foreign ambasssdors have at last interferred and entered a protest against the present conduct of the campaign in Servia. A dispatch states that several ambassadors have given warning to the Sublime Porte that unless the present system of enlisting volunteers as crusaders against Christians is stopped, European military intervention is inevitable. As a consequence of this warning the Sublime Porte has ordered that no more volunteers be enlisted against the Servians.

C. G. LANIER.

HICKORY, N. C.

In offering to the public for their use and relief the Old North State Vegetable Stomach Bitters,

I feel no hesitancy in saying this is the purest and best article ever offered them. I warrant each bottle to contain no chemical whatever—nothing but the best vegetable preparation, (See recommendation of physicians,) and the purest Domestic Whiskey.

In preparing this excellent tonic I have spared no pains or cost to make it just what I recommend it to be—

The Very Best Tonic ever offered to Invalids and Others and without the usual cry of "Encouraging Home Enterprise," I would say to all the suffering—Throw away the filthy and worthless drugs sold you heretofore by would-be "all cures," and try one bottle of

and if then you will say you have not been benefitted by its use, I will return to you such their money.
